Carineci, the national security adviser, has distanced himself from some of Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger's policies, saying he would recommend canceling weap-ons programs and building a small-U.S. military force if confirmed as Mr. Weinberger's successor.

Mr. Cartucci, who was recom-mended for confirmation Friday by the Senate Armed Services Committee did not specify which programs or forces he would cut in the Pentagon's budget crunch. However, in his testimony, Mr.

 Said arguments for the "nar-row" and "broad" interpretations of the anti-ballistic missile treaty of 1972 were "ambiguous." He offered to make decisions about tests of missile defenses in consultation with Congress. Committee members praised Mr.

Carlucci's cooperative tone, which contrasted with Mr. Weinberger's sometimes confrontational style. The panel voted, 18-0, Friday to recommend Senate approval of Mr. Carlucci. Senator Sam Nunn, Democrat of Georgia and chairman of the committee, said he hoped for a Senate vote next week. Earlier Friday, congressional negotiators announced that they had approved a compromise 1988 military budget of $296 billion, $16

By Steven V. Roberts New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - By nominating Judge Anthony M. Kennedy to fill the Supreme Court vacancy and making significant concessions in talks on reducing the deficit, President Ronald Reagan has agreed to compromise some of the basic goals and precepts he set for the final two years of his administration.

by something like a coalition government, in which power is shared by a Democratic Congress and a Republican president. As a result, said Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato, Republican of New York, "neither side can have its total point of view."

One symbol of that coalition was visible on Wednesday, when the president met with Senator Joseph R. Biden Jr., Democrat of Delaware, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. That meeting, also attended by Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the ranking Republican on the panel, signaled that the White House saw the need for "early and intense consultations" with congressional Democrats on Judge Kennedy's nomination, Mr. Fitzwater said.

A day earlier, in announcing his selec-tion of Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Reagan stressed the need for "a spirit of cooperation and bipartisanship" in the confirmation process, a striking contrast to the highly partisan tone he has often taken in discussing Supreme Court nominations.

Soviets and Finns Plan Car Ferry Link

HELSINKI (Reuters) — Finnish and Soviet companies said Friday that they were setting up a car ferry link from Helsinki to the Soviet ports of Leningrad and Riga. The three firms, Baltic Shipping Company, Finnsov Tours and Lomamatkat, said the ferry would carry up to 300 passengers on weekly trips.

The first service to Riga, capital of the Baltic republic of Latvia, would start next April. The voyage to Leningrad would take 15 hours and the trip to Riga 22 hours, a spokesman for Lomamatkat said.

Hong Kong is considering easing a ban on travelers from East European countries, a government official said Friday. The ban has been in effect since 1950 but recently has cost Hong Kong lucrative convention business. The official said visas for citizens from Warsaw Pact countries probably would be considered on an individual basis.

Early snowstorms forced the closing Friday of four major Swiss alping road passes until the spring. The authorities said the passes were the Grimsel, Furka, Grand St. Bernard, and Nufenen. Also closed, at least temporarily, were the Umbrail, Gothard, Klausen and Susten passes, moking Dri while chains were obligatory on the Simplon.

of East-West relations. With the turn to modified de-tente, the release of East Germans has noticeably swelled, and no shots have been heard since Erich Honecker, the East German leader, visited West Germany in Septem-ber. This week the U.S. deputy secretary of state, John C. Whitehead, was told by East German leaders that it was "much less likely that people will be shot at again.

All this makes for a unique medium, to which artists and graffitists have been drawn almost from the moment the first slabs of reinforced concrete began replacing the crude barriers thrown up on Aug. 13, 1961.

At the dawn of wall art, East German guards would climb over now and again to paint over the graffiti on the wall, which is actually several feet inside East Berlin. Now they come only to erase espe-

Rusty Heaps Beat Minnesota Winters

How does a car survive the mud, snow and de-icing salt of a Minnesota winter? Many drivers put their vehicles up on blocks in a garage for six months and buy an old chunker of a used car to make it through the cold weath-er. "It's something you do every year," Kathy Ashby told Larry Green of the Los Angeles Times, "just like putting on your storm windows."

Alex Johnson, a Minneapolis car salesman, said, "People store their good car, put it away like a bear going into hibernation."

"Winter-beaters," as such old wrecks are called in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, are especially favored by owners of rare or expensive vehicles that they do not want exposed to the salt that is spread on highways to keep them free of ice and snow.

"The cars just rot away be-cause of the salt," says Kim L. Frick, a technical writer. The answer: Buy a winter-beater and junk it when spring comes.

Pro-Smoking Drive Gains Force

Washington Accused of Aiding Marketing Effort Abroad

By Fred Hiarr

Washington Post Service
TOKYO — U.S. tobacco companies, faced with a shrinking market at home, are rapidly recruiting new smokers in Asia and the developing world, often with the aid of the U.S. government, according to delegates to an anti-smoking conference here.

The percentage of people who smoke in the industrialized world has steadily declined in recent years, health experts at the conference noted Thursday, but the proportion of smokers in developing countries is rising. The experts charged that tobacco companies had particularly targeted youth and women, who traditionally have not smoked in many Asian countries.

"The industry plan is to create demand among Oriental females," said Gregory N. Connolly, an ad-viser to the World Health Organization. "If you have one billion Oriental females who don't smoke as a market, that would more than replace the quitters in Western Eutope and North America." He added: "And death and disease will half of them in China. Several delegates said U.S. officials, in their zeal to open Asian markets to U.S. tobacco companies, had interfered with local gov-ernment health measures. They gave as examples:

• Last year Hong Kong an-nounced that it would become the first place in Asia to ban snuff and chewing tobacco. Elaine L. Chung, deputy secretary for health and welfare, said U.S. Tobacco Co., maker of Skol and other chewing tobaccos, lobbied hard against the ban, and a trade official of the U.S. Consulate called her to complain about the proposal. In Taiwan, when the U.S. government pressured Taipei to allow U.S. cigarettes to be imported, officials also urged Taiwan to end its ban on cigarette advertising, arguneeded to advertise, David D. Yen, businessman and chairman of a health foundation, said Taiwan held firm on television advertising but agreed to allow magazine ads.

In South Korea and Japan, U.S. officials lobbied hard for lower prices for imported cigarettes. When the Japanese Health Ministry formed a committee to study easures to reduce smoking, the U.S. Embassy said in a message to the State Department that the committee "poses the danger that, intentionally or not, action which might discriminate against foreign cigarettes might be recommended and subsequently adopted." "It's an overall emotional reaction - not terribly cognitive, not terribly rational - to what people are seeing and hearing."

Not everyone thinks the technology is so promising. "Democracy is meant to be government by consent of the governed, not government by consent of their guts," said James David Barber, a Duke University political scienust. "It's a prime illustration of the deterioration of political discourse in this country, the substitution of sentiment for reason."

One of the advantages of the Perception Analyzer, according to its promotional material, is that "it allows us to avoid the problems of semantic ambiguity and limited communication skills" so often encountered in so-called focus groups, where participants are called upon to express their views

Dr. Russel H. Patterson Jr., a neurosurgeon and vice chairman of the council, said in an interview: The doctor has a special social status, and in return society expects that the doctor will shoulder certain risks and take care of the sick." The statement of the association describes the doctor's duty in these terms: "A person who is afflicted with AIDS needs competent, compassionate treatment. Neither those who have the disease nor those who have been infected with the virus should be subjected to discrimination based on fear or prejudice, least of all by members of the health-care community." The AIDS virus can be spread through sexual intercourse with an infected partner or through exchanges of infected blood as on hypodermic syringes shared by intravenous drug users.

Anne M. Suns, a spokeswoman for the Federal Centers for Disease Control, which has been tracking AIDS, said the government knew of 12 cases in which health-care workers had become infected with the AIDS virus. Eight of the cases were in the United States and four were in other countries, she said. Some of the workers were pricked with contaminated needles. Several had prolonged exposure to infected body fluids. Others were exposed to blood from infected patients, and the workers had cuts or abrasions through which the virus might have passed. Kirk B. Johnson, general counsel of the AMA, said Thursday that the association had "no plans to actively enforce the policy" on

In his home town of Russell, Kansas, Bob

Fighting African Stereotypes

The "witch" Alice Lakwena and her Holy Spirit rebels in Uganda have brought a parcel of stereotypes on African magic and sorcery to the surface in the mass media. The hard core of this opinion can be summed up thus: Africa is dominated by magic and witchcraft - ancestral practices still alive in the modern world.

There are two approaches to this. For "modernists" like the Ugandan president,

A Moscow Boss Is Pushed Out Yoweri Museveni, development necessitates the eradication of traditional "superstition." For Westerners in search of "noble savages," or educated Africans looking for their roots, these practices are a precious heritage. In fact, these African phenomena deserve neither an excess of respect nor of indignity.

Movements like the Hoty Spirit rebels are, in strictly religious terms, anything but traditional. They mix traditional and imported elements (generally derived from missionary Christianity). And African magical-religious practices should not be lumped together as primitive." What observer would dare conuse Protestantism and Catholicism?

[The Holy Spirit movement can be compared to other religious movements, from the Mau-Mau in Kenya to the Mahdist sect re-sponsible for rioting in Kano, Nigeria, a few years ago. The importance of the social protest and political revolt of these movements is clear. One cannot reduce the march of thousands of men and women, holding off a regular army, to a question of manipulation of superstitious souls by embittered politicisms.

A Nation Grapples With Its Stalinist Legacy

By Roy Medvedev

This was written last month, before Mikhail Gorbachev delivered his Nov. 2 speech criticizing Stalinism. Mr. Medvedev is a dissident Soviet historian whose works have appeared regularly in the West.

OSCOW - As recently as last year, con-MOSCOW — As recently as last year, con-demnations of Stalin or Stalinism were found more frequently in hints and indirect form than in straight talk.

A decisive turn only began in January 1987 when Tengiz Abuladze's film "Repentance" came to our country's screens. Employing methods of realism, surrealism, the grotesque, the absurd and satire, the film deals Stalinism, and tyranny in general, a blow of great emotional force.

Between April and June of this year, the journal Druzhba Narodov published Anatoli Rybakov's novel "Children of the Arbat," which became not only the literary event of the year but an event in the country's public political life. For the first time in Soviet literature, Stalin appears not just as an episodic figure but as the central character of a novel. Mr. Rybakov paints a very accurate psychological and historical picture of Stalin in 1933 and 1934, when he was already plotting a series of crafty provocations to destroy all potential opponents, create a new ruling apparatus and consoli-date the totalitarian power of the "leader."

The offensive against Stalinism begun in nov-els, poems and films continued through this summer and fall in scores of articles, in reviews and in hundreds of letters from readers. Many associate the current criticism of Stalin with the anti-Stalin campaign of 1961 to 1964. There are similarities, but also one critical difference. In the early 1960s, the artistic intelligentsia was not yet entirely ready to support Khrushchev, And the party apparatus was clearly sabotaging the [anti-Stalinist] decisions of the 22d party congress held in 1961. But today's anti-Stalinist campaign is proceeding on a broader front and undoubtedly has the support not only of Mikhail Gorbachev but other influential members of the Politburo and the Central Committee.

Many of the same questions are being raised that were examined in the late 1950s and early 1960s: the terror of 1937-1938, the extermination of the commanding officers of the Red Army, Stalin's mistaken assessment of Hitler's plans in 1941 and defeats in the first years of the war, the atmosphere of terror, mistrust and suspicion propagated by the "Father of the Peoples" and Stalin's ruinous meddling in the social and natural sciences. Once again we can read lengthy essays about major figures of the party and government who fell victim to Stalin's arbitrary rule. But by early this year, issues arose that got too little attention in the 1960s. These include the expediency of Stalin's agrarian policies in 1927 and 1928, his renunciation of Lenin's New Economic Policy and his policy of collectivization and liquidation of the kulaks. V. Belov in his novel "The Last Days" and B. Mozhaev in "Peasant Men and Peasant Women" show the senseless destruction of productive forces in the countryside, the annihilation of the more productive farms, the growth of poverty and arbitrary rule, and the mass ruin and starvation of the peasantry. Today we can also read appraisals of Stalin by Marshal Georgi Zhukov that were excluded from his published memoirs ("Stalin was terrifying. People were in horror of going to see him.") There has been wide public response to the campaign, begun by Izvestia, to end lingering suspicious about the fate of millions of Soviet soldiers missing or taken prisoner in World War II. Strange as it may seem to foreign readers, millions of people who fell on the battlefields or who died in captivity beyond Soviet borders are not counted in the official figures of Soviet losses.

The anti-Stalin campaign of recent months is gathering in breadth, depth and intensity, as did the campaign of the 1960s. But the public response to criticism of Stalin's crimes today is not so resonant as it was 25 or 30 years ago. This is understandable. Most people who survived Stalin's terror, defeat in war and the violence he did to culture have already departed this life. For Soviet citizens in their 20s, 30s and 40s, "the Stalin Era" represents only history.

Tens of millions of people whose political outlook was formed in the last 20 years know nothing of Stalin's crimes. One should not be supprised that many users a people walls out on surprised that many young people walk out on the movie "Repentance." They do not under-stand the film. They lack the essential historical and aesthetic culture. This explains, I think, the fact that resistance to the new criticism of Stalinism is not so considerable as it was in the early 1960s or after the 20th party congress in 1956.

But there is resistance. Nearly every recent major anti-Stalinist work saw the light of day only after a complicated behind-the-scenes fight in which even members of the Politburo had to intercede. The letters streaming into newspaper and magazine offices contain many that mali-ciously attack anti-Stalin materials and sometimes even threaten their authors.

Your articles do damage to society, destroy peoples' belief and outlook as citizens," writes K. Kulyamova to the editors of Sovetskaya Kultura. You deprive them of patriotism and pride in their socialist ideals. Don't you have other problems to address besides airing dirty laundry? It must be said that the recent groundswell against Stalinism was unexpected for the social sciences and particularly for history and historians. Few noted historians have supported the fight against Stalinism. But these historians were not able to publish their thoughts in professional historical or social-science journals. Confusion reigns among university and sec-ondary-school teachers. All existing textbooks on Soviet history are inappropriate for students, as the noted pedagogue V. Svirsky shows con-vincingly in his article "History Keeps Sileat." These texts not only keep silent on many impor-tant events of our history, they often falsify them.

The major book on the history of the U.S.S.R., "Soviet Russia: 1917-1987," which appeared in bookstores this spring is astonishingly primitive, although practically every leading historian contributed to it. Now, not only the names of Khrushehev and Stalin but of Brezhnev and Chernenko have disappeared from history. Those most often mentioned are Lenin and Gorbachev Of course, the new criticism of Stalin and Stalinism has still not gone deep enough. Many "taboos" and "blank spots" remain. But there are many indications that this criticism will not be hastily derailed, but rather that it will widen and deepen. This prospect frightens bureaucrats and demagogues but pleases the majority of honest people in the Soviet Union.

D HAKA, Bangladesh — The op-position pulled out all the stops this week in poverty-stricken Bangla. desh, but it appears to have been trounced by the government of General Hussain Mohammed Ershad The general's leading opponents Sheikh Hasina Wazed, leader of the Awami League, and Begum Khalida Zia, leader of the Bangladesh Nation-topple the regime appears lacking.

On one level this is surprising. The government is widely seen as corrupt and unpopular. It has played fast and loose with democracy, blatantly tampering with election results last year. But the government is unlikely to fall. It is liberal enough to diffuse violent protest — newspapers can re-port on opposition statements and ral-lies — yet it is ruthless enough to deal harshly with protests, jailing 1,000 opposition activists in the weeks before the "siege." And, of course, General Ershad has the army on his side. Bangladesh has been bathed in blood before, first with the creation of Pakistan in 1947 and then in 1971. when East Pakistan broke away to form the Bengali state of Bangladesh.

Since then two of its rulers have been assassinated by the army (Sheikh Hasina's father and Mrs. Zia's husband). There is deep fear at the thought of another bloodbath. Yet Sheikh Hasina is frank about what might happen if she came to power: "The people must punish Er-shad." she said in a recent interview (she and Mrs. Zia since were placed under house arrest). Pressed as to whether she would let General Ershad leave the country to avoid retribution, she was blunt: "No, I can't go against the peoples' sentiment." Such inflammatory talk does not go down well in today's Bangladesh.

Perhaps the two women would make more progress if they had a convincing program beyond the "Er-shad must go" rhetoric. Neither makes more than general observations on the economy, Asia's poorest. Both seem to see nationalizations of industry as an answer to the lack of competitiveness. And General Ershad does have some virtues: He mounted a successful relief operation this summer when Bangladesh was hit by the worst floods in memory. Parts of the country, through which flow the mighty Ganges and the Brahmaputra, are still underwater. Thousands of people had to climb trees or take to makeshift boats. Yet only 700 died, far fewer than the thousands killed by less severe floods in 1974. Relief was provided quickly, and the army built up embankments and diverted floodwaters.

And there is evidence that General Erahad has got the economy moving. This nation of 100 million has long been regarded as a basket case, able to survive only on handouts. While still the recipient of extensive aid (much of which is siphoned off by corrupt politicians and army officers) there are signs of a new momentum. Powerty is still ubiquitous — never have I had such a swarm of beggars grabbing at me as on a recent night here - but there are indicators of progress to suggest that poverty is under attack.

From their initial, exotic view of savage but innocent America in the 17th and 18th centuries to their present-day picture of an America anarchically free, stylishly dangerous to live in. Mr. Reagan's early successes made these people believe that what his enthusiastic American supporters claimed might just be true — that the ed States had shown the way (the writer uses English) "to have our cake and eat it too." Margaret Thatcher was a believer in the market long before Ronald Reagan scious of social obligation, by French businessmen, who have always looked to the state as arbiter and to ratify and validate Thatcherism, and which silenced Mrs. Thatcher's some suspicion in Europe. It was condemned by the left, certainly, but it was also regarded with reserve by traditional Tories in Britain, conprotector, and even by conservative West Germans. Germany is supposed to be a citadel of the free market, but German banking and the

It influenced the economic policies of Socialists in Spain and of Social Democrats in Scandinavia. economy are kept under strict goverument supervision, and a level of social protection — "welfarism" — Reaganism was taken as a kind of vision of life and society. Suddenly, today, the vision is shattered. Moreover, the retreat from Reaganism began well before the stock market crash in October dramatized that the U.S. economy had gone wrong. Possi-bly the moral crash of Irangate was the critical factor, or perhaps it was those unspoken apprehensions about the American economy that led investors eventually to act as they did. But the European recoil from the American model is an illustration of how powerfully the American example has continued to influence the European imagination and the European sense of possibility (and the Russian; Mikhail Gorbachev's constant reference is to America).

It has been a striking affair, although not, in the end, an edifying one - a credit neither to Americans nor to Europeans. The illusion into which both willingly were drawn was one of irresponsibility: that we can have it all, and pay no price. It was an attempt, by a fundamentally puritan society, to clude its puritan conscience, its dread (the line is Wordsworth's) that "getting and spending we lay waste our powers."

The Byzantine ways of weapons lab politics are reflected in Mr. Woodruff's complaint: He says he loyally stood by an undertaking to deny to the press that his resignation was over a policy dispute on the X-ray laser, in return for a promise that the truth would be told among his peers. That promise was not kept. After elaborate hearings, he was reinstated as a senior scientist, though nothing was said about his demand to be able to tell the same top-level people in Washington that they had been misinformed. Hugh DeWitt's case is trickier. He has been a physicist at Livermore for more than 30 years, primarily on theoretical problems (he recently ran an international symposium on "Strong-ly Coupled Plasma Physics"). Now he is being told to get off such pure science and start studying directed nuclear energy weapons that could speed up SDI. His last performance rating was "unsatisfactory," which looks as if he is about to be fired. He suspects that his problem is the work he has done in support of a nuclear test ban. The latest of several shifting official arguments about why the United States cannot accept even a low-threshold test ban is that the nuclear arsenal has to be retested now and then for reliability. Mr. DeWitt has marshaled evidence to show that this is nonsense.

The one real ground for opposing a test ban is that it would prevent the development of new weapons. Good or bad? That is certainly a political decision, falsely detoured through pseudo-scientific obstacles. These are terribly complicated questions, on which political decision makers need scientific, nonpolitical advice. Corrupting the process can only hurt national security in the long run, whoever scores short-run points. The New York Times.

Envoy Says Vatican and China Move Toward Ties

BELIING -China and the Vatican are moving toward restoring relations severed by China 30 years ago, Cardinal Jaime L. Sin, the archbishop of Manila, said Friday after meeting Chinese religious and Communist Party leaders. "My first visit three years ago was very rough, like plowing a field which is very stony," the cardinal said in a telephone interview. Now it is very fertile. I think we will come to an agreement. It's a question of good will."

Cardinal Sin, who came to China with the blessing of Pope John Paul II, met with Zhao Ziyang, the Communist Party leader, for more than an hour Wednesday. It was the highest-level meeting between the Roman Catholic Church and Beijing since ties were cut in 1957.
The cardinal quoted Mr. Zhao as saying that the main obstacle to restoring relations was the Vatican's diplomatic recognition of the Nationalist government in Taiwan.

"I think that issue is no longer a problem," the cardinal said. "There is only one China. Zhao is very understanding. He has a beautiful vision of the future." China's Catholics, who number several million, suffered widespread persecution during the 1950s and during the Cultural Revolution of 1966 to 1976. All churches were closed and some were destroyed. Many priests died, and others are believed to be still in prison. The cardinal said he had asked Chinese officials to be allowed to visit imprisoned Catholics but was refused permission. He said he specifically had raised the case of Bishop Joseph Fan Xueyan, 79, who was imprisoned in 1984 for 10 years. He was accused of ordaining priests in secret. Cardinal Sin was to fly Friday to Xian and then to Shanghai on Sunday. He said he hoped to meet in Shanghai with Bishop Ignatius

Gong Pinmei, who was freed in 1985 after 30 years in prison. Many Chinese Catholics worship in private homes and, like Bishop

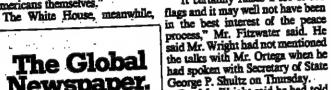

Gong, refuse to renounce their allegiance to the pope. China's officially controlled Catholic Church, the Patriotic

Strike it rich in Canada's Envorite Lottery. You pick your own numbers playing Latte 6/49

That's right ... you can win millions by picking your own numbers playing Lotto 6/49—Canada's most popular Government Lottery. In fact, last year Lotto 6/49 paid out $354,736,589.00 in ALL CASH PRIZES. And it's all free of Canadian taxes. There are two draws each week for a grand prize guaranteed to be not less than $1,000,000.00 with many millions more in secondary prizes. Grand prizes often run into the millions and have been as high as $13,890,588.80. Imagine what you could do with that much cash! This is your opportunity to find out because now you can play the lottery that's making so many millionaires in Canada. PRIZE BREAKDOWN (Actual Sample of One Draw)

WHAT IS LOTTO 6/49?

Lotto 6/49 is the official Canadian version of Lotto-the world's most popular form of lottery. It's the lottery in which you pick your own numbers and it's called "6/49" because you select any 6 of 49 possible numbers from 1 to 49. Your numbers are entered in the Lotto 6/49 computer system and if they match the six winning numbers chosen in the draw-you win the grand prize. Or if you have only 3, 4 or 5 numbers correct you win one of thousands of secondary prizes available.

GENEVA — There seems to be an infinite number of ways of presenting "The Magic Flute," multiple methods of combining its lofty symbolism, popular comedy and fairy tale, and the transforming effect at all levels of Mozart's music. The new production at the several attitudes into one place decorative, didactic, dialectic, ironic, farcical — and present the whole in a musical package marvelously shaped by Jeffrey Tate.

Perhaps the temptation is to read too much into Benno Besson's staging. Besson, venturing into opera after a cosmopolitan career that has ranged from close association with Bertolt Brecht in East Berlin to present directorship of the Co-médie de Genève, can be counted on to get a lot from a text - even one as maligned as Schikaneder's. Not only was most of the spoken text employed —eminently reasonable for the multilingual Geneva public - but it was delivered with an elaborately disingenuous straightness, accompanied by de-tailed comic mime, which elicited response — and laughter — on more than one level.

Take the first encounter of Tamino and Papageno, neither one of which has a clue that another world exists than his own. "Who am I?" says Papageno. "What a dumb question. A man like you." Tamino knows better, but not much. "My father is king . . . so I am called prince." This last was delivered by Jerry Hadley with a round-faced essness comic in itself, a living contradiction to the assurance of the words, and at the same time the tip of an unsoundable social-politi-

Jean-Marc Stehle's sets and costumes and Jean-Jacques Bouhon's lighting had much to do with the production's charm, much of it reminiscent of Maurice Sendak country. Lush tropical vegetation inhabited by congenial lions and other animals, occasionally parted to reveal the crumbling temples of wisdom, reason and nature. The and water were more convincing than the usual fraternity inititiation

The costumes postulated three levels of society. Papageno, Papaquasi animal world, birdlike or simian according to need; Tamino and Pamina (garbed demurely in baggy black pantaloons and a secthrough top) at first inhabited a kind of comic-strip world, then grew into a nobler status, while Sarastro and his cronies presented their bourgeois version of an exalt-

Art Market Remains Fragile Despite Spending Spree

New YORK — As John Mar-ion, chairman of Sotheby's North America and its premier auctioneer, brought down his ham-mer on the last of 94 loss, of which 75 were sold for $110 million, on Wednesday night he made history

This is the highest total ever sold in a single auction, thanks to the cent van Gogh's much celebrated "Irises," which sold for $53.9 million. But, most significantly, Sotheby's sale confirmed the two trends that came out strongly in this week's sales. The art market is displaying extraordinary vigor despite the ongoing stock crisis. At the same time there is a massive redistribution of parts in the cast: The United States is receding fast as the Japanese and the Europeans compete for the first place.

It was Tuesday night at Chris-tie's that professionals found out that the market was bullish against all odds. Christopher Burge, Chris-tie's president, who was taking the sale in person, says that he knew that this sale would go well the minute two paddles went up simultaneously as Lot 2, a Renoir portrait, appeared on the turntable. Barton Howard Jenks turned threequarters left in formal attire. Painted in 1865, it is of interest to American antiquarians - Jenks invented a new type of gun that he tried to sell to the French government. It is of even greater interest in terms of art history. The portrait illustrates Renor's early realist phase, influenced by Manet. Because this is not an Impressionist painting, howev-er, professionals hardly expected it to sell. It did reasonably well at

Other apparent non-starters did better still, much to the surprise of dealers sitting around me. A snowy landscape by Renoir, also painted in pre-impressionist days, went up to $242,000; a very clumsy Degas view of two horses in a pasture sold for $220,000, and a Fantin-Latour picture of a vase filled with flowers, showing signs of wear, made $440,000.

As Christie's sale, briskly conducted by Burge, who was at the peak of his form, gathered momengame. They turned the sale into a success story when it might so easily have ended in semi-failure. They ran up Bourdelle's bronze of "Herakles" as an archer, in a grayby one of them for $143,000. Characteristically the Japanese acquired works that almost certainly would have gone to Americans last May. Such is Monet's manve, green and blue landscape of 1885, "Prin-temps, bord de l'Epte" which was in Albert Spencer's collection in New York around 1891 and en-

Such is also Renoir's portrait of a Wednesday morning at Chris-young girl carrying a basket filled tie's, in a sale devoted to drawings with flowers. The girl is seen three- and watercolors, the Europeans quarters with baby doll blue eyes got the lion's share, 42 percent, and intense red lips against a blur followed by the Americans, 31 perof green and yellow vegetation. The cent, and the Japanese, 27 percent, picture was painted in 1888. Its still a huge percentage for a single history can be followed from the country. In the afternoon, the Japant the Galerie Durand-Ruel. which handled the Impressionists, bought it from Renoir on Jan. 28. 1891, for 500 gold france and sold it to W.L. Cook of New York on March 19, 1892, for $1,000. Durand-Ruel bought it back via his New York branch in 1910 for an indisclosed amount. On Dec. 12, 1912, Mrs. Nelson Robinson got it . The stage was set for Sotheby's for $14,500. It went through two more New York collections before being displayed at the Metropoli-tan Museum in the memorable exhibition, "New York Collects," in 1968. Last May, a piece so inti-

of American connoisseurship, might have stayed in the United States. It was bought by Hiroshi

Matsuo, vice president of the Mat-

for $3.3 million. For the first time, the Japanese departed from their traditional buying pattern in Impressionist and Modern art by acquiring works such as Kandinsky's Muman view with a church, done in 1909, for $2,420,000. While still figural, it borders on abstraction and has intense contrasted colors with black delineations that usually appeal most to collectors from the Germanic cultural sphere. The picture was in Chicago collections for a long time and would most probably have stayed in America had it been sold in May. By the end of the day, the Japanese had spent $18.1 mil-lion, 48 percent in value of Christie's $37.5 million sale against 25 percent by the Americans who trailed the Europeans' 27 per cent.

nese were as bullish as ever, bagging 42 percent of the paintings and demonstrating, if need be, that top end. The failure rate in the Wednesday afternoon sale of "Paintings, Part II" was a relatively moderate 20.71 percent in value.

the pattern established at Christie's. As the first Monet landscape "Antibes, vue du plateau Notre-Dame," dated 1888, came on the block, Japanese hands went up. Al-though this too has a long Ameri-can history — it was sold at the American Art Association in New. York in 1895 and a second time in 1935 — a Japanese buver snatched it for $2.53 million, 50 percent over :

the high estimate. The next substantial Monet was a garden view, confused in composition and too late for its style by European standards. This too has American connections. But as it rose to a record for Monet at $5.88 million, the successful bidder was, again, Japanese. As on Tuesday, the Japanese displayed a willingness to deviate from their usual buying pattern by going, for exam-ple, after an early Kees van Dongen portrait of 1909 still smacking of Fauvist art, for $522,500. They set . a record for Dali when one of them; bought "The Battle for Tetuan," painted in 1962, for $2,662,000. Altogether the Japanese bought 18 of 75 lots, which not counting the van Gogh represented 23 percent in value of the pictures sold Wednes-for $13.4 million and the Europe ans 26 lots for $21.6 million. Most tellingly, van Gogh's "Irises," long ensconced in the Whitney possessions and, indeed, consigned for sale by John Whitney Payson will be leaving the United States. It was knocked down to a "European" remains obvious. With the van Gogh, the failure rate was 13 percent, but without it 23 percent, a kind of standard rate these last few days that would have risen steeply without the Japanese. Sotheby's performance, including John Mar-ion's own superb auctioneering, remarkable as it is, has not dispersed the gloom among professionals. Most dealers are cautious and "stay." liquid." The Victorians used to say that the proof of the pudding is in the eating. The professionals are barely nibbling at it.

'30s Mistakes Are Obvious, But a Solution for Today?

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service OLOGNA — After a week of intense discussions here among leading European and American economists and problems that must be solved if the stock market collapse is to be prevented from becoming a greater catastrophe.

The biggest worry is whether the world's financial structure can withstand further and even greater shocks. Harold van Boren Cleveland, a consulting economist and former senior economist at Citibank, said that his concern was not so much about the big banks, which the Federal Reserve and other central banks would rescue, but the so-called nonbank banks, such as large brokerage houses, retailers and credit card companies. Without a responsible "lender of last resort" to sup-port such institutions, Mr. Cleveland warned that widespread failures of nonbank banks could cause a severe contraction of the money and credit system.

'A recession is coming,' a leading economist said. Logically, there is no way out.'

The globalization of finan-cial markets and the speed with which funds can be pulled out of one market after another increase the risks of a systemic break-down. And exchange-rate instability is an immediate worker nor Europeans and Americans alike. Participants at the conference on the Marshall Plan in retrospect, sponsored by the Rologna Center of Johns Hopkins University, were confused over whether the United States intends to defend the dollar or not.

A suggestion by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker 3d that the United States was prepared to let the dollar fall rather than risk a recession by tightening money provoked anxiety that Washington is putting domestic politics ahead of monetary stability.

Some economists argued that dollar devaluation was incapable of solving the U.S. trade deficit. Professor Jan Kregel of the Bologna Center said that in the absence of more fundamental measures, there could be "no equilibrium rate for the dollar." The dollar's value will depend on rates of economic growth in Western Europe and the United States, rates of inflation, actions that may or may not be taken to narrow the U.S. budget deficit, and the low level of American savings relative to investment.

CTION by the United States to shrink its trade deficit will almost surely mean reductions in American living stan-dards, as consumption is reined in. A reduction in the U.S. trade deficit also is likely to mean a loss of export sales for Europe and Japan, raising the chances of a recession.

"A recession is coming," Mr. Cleveland said. "Logically, there is no way out. It's necessary for a closing of the external deficit. What's ahead for us is a painful weakening of aggregate demand." The big question, he added, is whether a recession can be kept from getting out of hand.

Most conference felt that the mistakes made at the start of the Greet December could be avaided. After the 1929 steels

Most of the conferees felt that the mistakes made at the start of the Great Depression could be avoided. After the 1929 stock crash, 1930 was a year of typical recession. The phunge into deep depression did not come until late 1931; brought on by restrictive fiscal and monetary policies, a worldwide spread of protectionism and a breakdown of the international banking system.

The common, although not universal, view in Bologna was that enough is now known about fiscal, monetary and trade policies to avoid a rerun. But some worry that the divisions among governments on both the problems and the solutions are so great that not enough will be done in time.

As in the postwar reconstruction ers, when European sconomies were shattered and U.S. strength was overwhelming, a plan to rescue the world economic system is needed. Yet a solution the's. As the first Model index today, with vastly different circumstances, particularly a relatively weakened America, will require utterly different approaches from the Marshall Plan - and a similarly cooperative spirit.

Can Steven Jobs Pull It Off This Time?

Apple's Founder Seeks Comeback With 'Next'-Generation Computer

> By Andrew Pollack New York Times Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Gliding across the stage, a huge screen behind him, Steven P. Jobs has his audience of community college educators mesmerized. He is expounding on his vision of computerized education. In the future, Mr. Jobs says, sophisticated computer simulations will allow students to walk through Athens with Plato, experience life in 17th-century France or perform biochemistry experiments normally requiring a $5 million laboratory.

Steve Jobs is on a quest again. Two years after being forced out of Apple Computer, the company he co-founded as a scruffy 21-year-old, he is preparing for his comeback.

In a few months, Next Inc., the company Mr. Jobs started with five devotees after leaving Apple, will introduce its first product, a high-powered computer for the college market.

Industry sources expect the machine to be introduced by Industry sources expect the machine to be introduced by March and to be shipped by summer, in time for the 1988-89 academic year. Prototypes have been completed, they say, and are being shown to a select few in universities and in the Few people, however, say Mr. Jobs, who is 32 and now wears European suits instead of blue jeans, is interested in selling only to educational institutions. His speeches have been sprinkled with references to the coming "fourth wave" in personal computers — the machine that will follow the Apple II, IBM PC and Macintosh. He leaves little doubt as to whose machine he thinks

Next's new machine is already the object of intense apecula-tion in the industry—in part, because of what it is said to be its dazzling sound and graphics capability. Even its color—black—will set it apart. "It'll make your jaw drop," Mr. Jobs

But much of the attention comes from a continuing public fascination with the man behind the computer. Next's success or failure could do much to enhance or destroy Mr. Jobs's reputafailure could do much to enhance or destroy Mr. Jobs's reputation as a personal computer visionary, as someone who can successfully package advanced technology into products and spot the coming trends. The new product may also test his ability to run a company, something he never really did at Apple.

His reputation on that front is already under siege, in part because of two recent books that discuss in some detail his years at Apple. "Accidental Millionaire." by Lee Butcher, contends that Mr. Jobs was bucky, not talented. "Odyssey," by John Sculley, Apple's chairman and chief executive, is more charitable —it credits Mr. Jobs with being charismatic and "ahead of his - it credits Mr. Jobs with being charismatic and "ahead of his

But both books paint a picture of a man who almost destroyed Apple by ignoring the opinions of others, berating those around him and insinuating himself into every decision. Mr. Jobs has said he has not read the books, proclaiming, "I'd rather shape the Shaping the future will be difficult, though. Few entrepreneurs who make it big are able to strike gold again. Some flop the second time around because they try to outdo their former successes or are driven by ego rather than a good product idea. The product idea Mr. Jobs has chosen is a tough one. Over the past few years, the education market has become highly competitive, with such giants as International Business Machines Corp., Digital Equipment Corp., Apple and Sun Microsystems making strong efforts. "Steve is not first this time," said Scott McNealy, president of Sun Microsystems.

Mr. Jobs has said little about what his new company will do, and he declined to be interviewed.

What he has said is that Next wants to build a powerful computer to be used in university instruction. It will have the power of an engineering workstation, which generally costs more

Dow Lower on Budget Doubts

as Wall Street's worries about deficit-reduction talks in Washington overshadowed positive economic reports issued this week.

Declining issues outpaced advancing ones by about a 4-3 ratio. Volume was about 174.92. million shares, down from 206.28 million traded

Thursday. The Dow was down about 20 points most of the morning and early afternoon. A midday spurt trimmed the loss to about 10 points before the sell-off in the final 30 minutes.

"There was a little buying in the afternoon," said John Burnett, senior vice president at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette. "It's been a slow and dull day, with people waiting for some intelli-gent comments" from Washington "on what's going to be done on the budget and trade deficits."

Mr. Burnett said there was a lot of "fencesitting" as congressional and White House ne-gotiators continued to wrestle with ways to reduce the twin deficits. But, barring "any earth-shaking political events." Mr. Burnett said he was inclined to predict a pickup in the market next week.

"We are dealing in a very uncertain environment," he added, however.

NEW YORK — Prices on the New York expected. The Labor Department said the Pro-Stock Exchange fell Friday in moderate trading ducer Price Index, which measures inflation at ducer Price Index, which measures inflation at the wholesale level, fell 0.2 percent in October. Analysts had expected a 0.3 percent increase. In addition, the Commerce Department said

The Dow Jones industrial average ended 25.20 points lower at 1,935.01 following a 15-point fall in the final 30 minutes of trading. The 30-stock blue-chip barometer had jumped 61.01 Thursday. For the week, it fell 24.04 points.

In addition, the Commerce Department said retail sales fell only 0.1 percent last month, far less than the anticipated drop of 2 percent. Stock prices soared Thursday after a report that the U.S. merchandise trade deficit narrowed to $14.08 billion in September, compared with $15.7 billion in August. The September figure was well below the $15 billion many analysts had forecast. "The big encouragement was the trade re-port, but that was a one-day event," said Eugene Peroni Jr., chief technical analyst at Janmey Montgomery Scott Inc. in Philadelphia.

"The market enthusiasm is a bit more tempered now as we await action from Capitol Hill on the deficit. Traders are wary about holding positions over the weekend."

European Airline Group May Buy Into United's Reservations System

NEW YORK — The chief executive of British Airways PLC said a group of European carriers was talking with Allegis Corp. about buying a minority stake in the reservation sys-tem of Allegis's United Airlines unit.
"We are waiting for some more information," the executive, Colin Marshall, said after a presentation to analysts. United's Apollo reservations system is al-ready working with British Airways and a group of other European carriers to build a worldwide reservations system. As part of its restructuring, Allegis is offering up to half of Covia, the unit that owns Apollo. So far, the group, which calls itself Galileo, includes BA, Alitalia, KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, Swissair, Brinsh Caledonian Airways, Austrian Airlines, TAP Air Portugal, Aer Lin-gus and Covia. But Galileo does not own any of

Mr. Marshall said Galileo's investment ba er, Morgan Stanley, was talking with First Bos-ton, the banker handling bids for Allegis's units during restructuring.

He said there was no time limit to make a bio for part of Covia and that the members of Galileo would bid jointly, "if we make one." Separately, Mr. Marshall said British Air-ways could make a new offer to acquire privately held British Caledonian as soon as next week

BA's acquisition of the smaller airline was ap-proved Wednesday by the British government. Once the merger is completed, about 2,000 jobs will be eliminated from the combined company, Mr. Marshall said, adding that pay scales for workers at the two companies were roughly at parity, adjusting for differences in work rules.

British Airways employed an average of 39,500 in the year ended March 31, 1987. British Caledonian employment figures were not immediately available. The chief executive said air fares across the North Atlantic and from London to Europe entire sector has been under pressure since early were raised 3 percent to 5 percent for this winter to offset higher expenses, mostly from increased

JOBS: Apple's Founder Seeks Comeback With 'Next'-Generation Computer

(Continued from first finance page) Apple was crushing to him. "Imaginate of a personal computer, $3,000 inc. yourself being compared to that of a personal computer, $3,000 inc. Henry Ford," said Michael Murray, to 54,500. The machine will come with software tools that will allow professors to create what Mr. Jobs phas called "simulated learning ensurements."

Apple was crushing to him. "Imaginate of him." Imaginated being compared to the pointed of share.

at lunch with Paul Berg, the Nobel Prize-winning biologist at Stanford University. Mr. Berg talked about the need for powerful machines to run educational simulations.

So Mr. Jobs, who has said he was proudest of Apple's contributions to education, resigned from his rening position as chairman of the board, and started Next. When Apple found out that the product Next hoped to build was similar to one in Apple's future it sued for theft of trade secrets. The resulting settlement places some restrictions on Next's computer. Ap-ple also gets a chance to inspect the machine before it goes to market. Next is different from many star-tups. To start Apple, Mr. Jobs and Stephen Wozniak, the electronics

Mr. Jobs is paying rather low salaries these days, too, offering former Apple people 60 to 70 percent of their Apple pay and stock options amounting to one eighth of 1 percent ownership of Next.

Still, many people flock to work for Mr. Jobs, drawn by the feeling that they can make a difference in

Mr. Jobs, some say, is like the charismatic leader of a cult, or at least of a fraternity — a master at motivating people. "He believes what he is saying, and he believes it so fervently that you want to believe it," said Mr. Murray, the former Macintosh marketing manag-

Mr. Jobs also can be intimidating, temperamental and demand-ing, "He's very impatient with peo-ple he views as stupid," said an associate. "And there's no gray area with Steve. You're either bright or you're not."

ing the idea or product "brain-damaged." People learn to stand their ground, however, because of what employees have dubbed the "three times" theory: The second time Mr. Jobs considers the idea or product, the theory goes, he will like it better; the third time he will call it "insanely great." Only a few people have left Next. But many of the people Mr. Jobs tried to hire from the Macintosh group have not signed on. Some of the best have gone on to form Radius Inc., which is achieving great success making large screens and other peripherals for the Macin-

Still, some close to the company say that both Mr. Jobs and his followers have mellowed. The people in their twenties who gladly vorked 90 hours a week in the Macintosh group are now in their thirties, with families and children. Mr. Jobs apparently no longer be-lieves he alone knows what the cus-tomer wants, an attitude he was said to have had at Apple. Within a week of forming Next, Mr. Jobs and his team headed off to ask universities what they wanted in a new computer.

Next faces a number of challenges in the coming year. Many of its competitors can afford to give computers away to colleges, for example. Still, the education market is full of opportunities. Universities like to push the frontiers of technology and will buy a new, snazzy machine even if it is not backed by a huge marketing effort. They will also do much of the support of the machine themselves, working out bugs and even writing software. Next hopes to capitalize on this by selling direct, perhaps to univer-sity bookstores. By bypassing retail markups, and by relying on the universities for support, the com-pany plans to sell its machines cheaply but profitably. It is expect-ed to start with the most renowned universities and rely largely on personal relationships to sell, keeping advertising to a minimum.

TOKYO — Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita approved the entry Friday of two consortiums, one of which includes Cable & Wireless PLC of Britain, into Japan's deregulated international telecommunications market.

Formal government licenses will be awarded within a mouth, officials said. Despite British and U.S. government pressure, Japan's Ministry of Posts and Telecommunications had balked at allowing two consortiums to compete with Kokusai Denshin Denwa Co., which had a monopoly on Japan's international phone service before the market was opened up to competition under a 1985 law.

One consortium, International Telecom Japan Inc., is made up entirely of Japanese companies. The other, International Digital Communications Planning, has 34 members, among them Cable & Wireless, Pacific Telesis International of the United States, and C. Itoh & Co. and other Japanese companies. Cable & Wireless holds a 16.8 percent stake in IDC.

The question of the license had triggered a dispute between Japan and Britain, with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher challenging Tokyo to demonstrate its commitment to opening its domestic market to foreign competition. | Period | P London Metals | Income | 1987 | 1987 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 | 1988 DM Futures Options 1986 176.7 8.39 9.75 1986 677.2 24.59 2.46 1987 311.5 11.6 0.24 Culto-Settle

Dollar Slips From Highs on Light Profit-Taking

Compiled by Our Staff From Disputches NEW YORK - The dollar closed barely changed Friday in New York after slipping in Europe, reflecting disappointment over the failure of White House and congressional negotiators to reach an accord in budget-cutting talks.

Many investors took profits after the dollar had been buoyed Thursday and early Friday on news that the U.S. trade deficit narrowed in September to $14.08 billion from $15.68 billion the previous month.

The failure to make progress in the budget delicit talks brought the dollar down and should give us a lower opening for the currency on Monday," said Rory O'Donohoe, a oreign currency trader at United

Porsche Plans Production Cuts

STUTTGART - Porsche AG, the luxury car maker, said Friday that it planned to cut production because of sales problems in the United States, its most important market.

The company said the recent stock market collapse had led to "caution among purchasers of luxury goods, especially on the American market." It also said price increases in the United States were planned for Dec. 1 but gave no details.

A spokesman said that Porsche had hoped to produce 48,000 cars in the business year ending July 1988 but that the total would now probably be closer to 40,000. In the 1986-87 year, production was about 50,000 and Porsche sold more than 60 percent of its cars in the United States.

For this year, the administration is forecasting 3.2 percent GNP growth, sharply higher than the 2.2 percent in 1986. However, the economy must grow by at least 2.1 percent in the current quarter to meet that target. Looking at next year, Mr. Sprinkel warned that a recession could not be ruled out. TN the 18th century, agriculturalists began to A assert a new degree of control over nature, no-where more so than in Britain. One result was that in the course of the century the weight of ordinary English cattle and sheep at slaughter nearly doubled; another was the emergence by the century's end of prize stock breeding, with individual builts and cows receiving awards, fetching unprecedented prices, and exciting enormous interest when they were put on show.

The distinguishing qualities of these herbivorous superstars were their size and weight, which were both prodigious. Not everyone was impressed: there were critics who complained that they were humbering and grotesque, that they suffered from reproductive disorders and shortness of breath, that the overfat meat they yielded was barely edible. Scientific stock-breeding is the first of the separate topics that Harriet Ritvo considers in The Animal Estate," a study of Victorian attitudes toward animals and the social assumptions that lay behind them. In a chapter with the made-to-order title "Barons of Beef," Ritvo argues that the true purpose of champion cattle was to affirm the ascendancy of their predominantly aristocratic owners. dancy of their precommantly aristociatic owners.
The display of prize animals, she writes, was "a pageant"; proprietors might make practical or patriotic claims for their beasts, but essentially they offered them as living proof that the traditional hierarchy of the English countryside was more secure than ever. Such an interpretation wouldn't have come as a complete surprise at the time. Ritvo cites one early Victorian critic inveighing against noblemen who "can afford a fancy, whether it is the purchase of a Titian, or the production of a prize bullock," and she quotes a skit from Punch about an imaginary Dog shows, which began to flourish in the 1860s, provide Ritvo with a more complicated case of social assertion. The relative physical malleability of dogs permitted fanciers, who were mostly middleclass, to breed their own status symbols (and there were anistocratic owners who resented their prosumption). At the same time, the poor man's dog was generally regarded by those above as no better than its owner.

In the final chapters of the book, Ritvo turns her attention to more exotic material. Starting from the fact that the original moving spirit behind the London Zoo was a notable empire builder. Stamford Raffles (the founder of Singapore), she suggests that the zoo itself can be best understood as a symbol of imperial domination. Big game hunting, too, is presented as above all an aspect of empire, and we are asked to see a parallel between the shift from wholesale to modified slaughter in the late 19th century (as stocks of wild animals became depleted) and the shift of emphasis in colonial rule from conquest to stewardship.

Ritvo is a historian of the "unmasking" school. for whom the past must never be taken on its own terms. Much of what she says is obviously true, and she musters a good deal of unfamiliar and often deeply interesting evidence. But she writes without warmth, and with her talk of "metonymic roles" and warmth, and with her talk of "metonymic roles" and "hegemonic discourse" she is far too ready to put the complicated experience of actual human beings through the mangle of a reductive jargon.

As a result, she repeatedly overstates her case. For example, she tells us that the guidebooks to 19th-century 200s were "inveterately linear, prescribing a single route through the exhibits, from the entrance to the refreshment stand." Nothing so very terrible about that, one might have thought: After all, people weren't positively compelled to save the refreshment stand till last. But Ritvo goes on to explain that the guidebooks' advice was all part of a "strategy of appropriation and control." gy of appropriation and control."

Since King Wooden, U.S. College Basketball Has Had Only Pretenders

By John Feinstein Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - Once upon a time, with the start of each U.S. college-basketball season, there was a No. 1 team: U.C.L.A. And, almost as inevitably when the season ended, there was a No. 1 team: UCLA. Ten times in 12 years.

the final four once (1980), and has not gotten beyond the round of 32 since. No one has speed forward to take the Bruins' place. Indiana, beginning with 1976, has won three national titles under Bob Knight — the most recent last March when Keith Smart broke Syracuse's heart with four seconds left in their game — but no one has dominated the way UCLA once did.

And, in all likelihood, it will be forever thus. Last season was a perfect example of what col-lege basketball has become Indiana, the national champion, trailed in five of its six NCAA sames empion, trailed in five of its six NCAA games and needed a loss by Purdue on the last day of the season to tie for the Big Ten Conference championship. Syracuse, the runner-up, finished

This season promises to be no different. There will be no clear-cut No. I team as the season begins later this month. > Nothing is certain in college basketball, which is what makes it so much fun, the return of the short three-point shot notwithstanding The only new rule of significance this season is a crackdown on intentional fouling particularly in the end-game. If the officials enforce the new rule - two shots, plus possession even if a shot goes in while the foul is occurring - it could cal down on late-game free-throw parades and tackling on breakaways.

Once again, the 64-team NCAA tournament will be a crap-shoot. The Big Ten has five teams capable of winning the whole thing: Indiana, lowa, Purdue, Illinois and Michigan. The Big the regular season in a three-way tie for first in the Big East and lost the conference tournament. again be the class of the independents. "November just doesn't mean anything, ex-cept maybe for the fans," said North Carolina State's coach, Jim Valvano, who has been to the final eight three of the last five years. "March is what the sport is all about. That and getting ready for March." Valvano's team proved that last season. After a 17-14 regular season, the Wolfpack saved itself from an awful year by winning the ACC tournament. This year, Val-winter that made the difference for Syracise. But even it has question marks, having lost its best three-point shooter, Greg Monroe, and its best defensive stopper, Howard Triche, Still, there is a basketball saying that the team that returns a good point guard and a good center only gets better. That description fits Jim Bocheim's team. It does not fit Kansas, which lost both its point guards, Cedric Hunter and Mark Turgen, but it loaded everywhere else, most notageon, but is loaded everywhere else, most nota-bly with the return of Danny Manning, the 6-college player of the year. The Jayhawks have athletes galore, including three junior-college transfers who will give them quickness and depth. "The key is still Danny for us," said their coach, Larry Brown. "We asked him to do a lot last year, especially in terms of being a leader. He's not that kind of person by nature. But be's going to have to do that for us this year."

going to have to do that for us this year."

Last year Purdue was the team picked to reign in March, Instead, the Boilermakers collapsed. They were 24-3 going into the last game of the regular season with a chance to win the Big Ten title outright at Michigan, only to be embarrassed by the Wolverines, 104-68, then blown out by Florida in the second round of the NCAA tournament. "I really don't have an answer for what happened," said the coach, Gene Keady. "The best thing about our team last year was that we were consistent. But when we needed to raise ourselves a level or two, we couldn't do it. I think this group may be able to do that though."

Four starters are back, including sweet-shooting Troy Lewis, power forward Todd Mitchell and underrated point guard Everette Stephens. But it has been a troubled preseason for the Boilermakers. Lewis broke a foot and, just when he returned, Mitchell had arthroscopic knee surgery. Both are back now, but senior center Jeff Arnold, the sixth man last year, is out until January because of academic troubles and was arrested during a loud party in October. Not the tranquil fall a coach hopes for.

J.R. Reid, the superstar sophomore forward, will miss the season opener because he and Steve Bucknall got into a fight in a Raleigh nightclub. "I told them we go over there once a year to play," said the Tar Heels' coach, Dean Smith, Tark should be enough, "Adding to Smith," Tark should be enough, "Adding to Smith's problems have been the persistent nose-bleed that kept him out of practice for four days and the murder-suicide involving the parents of starting center Scott Williams.

If Carolina does falter, Duke, Georgia Tech and North Carolina State all have the talent to win the ACC. The Blue Devils, who surprised everyone by winning 24 games and reaching the NCAA's final 16, return four starters and have a strong freshman class. Tech has the most highly touted freshman in the country in 6-7 swingman Dennis Scott, and perhaps the best pair of forwards in Tommy Hammonds and Duane Ferrell. State has four guards who can play, two seniors and two freshmen, and if Valvano can rein in talented center Charles Shackleford, the Wolfpack will be excellent.

Syracuse must be the Big East lavorite, especially with Pitt losing Goodson. The Panthers are still superb up front with Charles Smith and the nation's leading rebounder, Jerome Lane. If their coach, Paul Evans, can just get solid play from one-time walk-on Mike Cavanaugh or freshman Sean Miller, Pitt could be It, or something resembling it, in March.

At Half-Season, a Whole Lot of Surprises

The board said Ferriola's suspension would be reduced to 90 days if he did not appeal. Richard Corbinero, chairman of the racing board, said the investigation was continuing, and that parimutual records were being the investigation was continuing, and that paramutue records were using scrutinized. Other sources said the three horses were being further tested. Ferriola, who has denied any wrongdoing, said he trained the horses on Lasix but did not administer the drug within 48 hours of their races. Lasix, a directic prescribed to prevent hemorrhaging but widely thought to improve overall performance, usually passes out of a horse's system in 24 hours.

Bean Leads in Hawaii, Stadler in Japan

KAPALUA, Hawaii (Combined Dispatches) — Defending champion Andy Bean shot seven-under-par 65 Thursday for a two-round total of 131 and a three-stroke lead over Sandy Lyle of Scotland and Lanny Wadkins in the Kapalus International solf tournament.

Payne Stewart was fourth, at 136, with Ben Crenshaw and Ian Woosnam of Wales at 138. Lyle, the first-round leader, and Stewart shot 69.

Wadkins carded 67, Crenshaw 66 and Woosnam 70.

In Gotemba, Japan, Craig Stadler shot 65 to go from 31st place to a seven-way tie for the halfway point lead of the Taiheiyo Club Masters tournament. Tom Watson and Bernhard Langer of West Germany were among a group of nine two strokes back.

'She didn't want to go on with anyone," says Patty Neger, an ABC spokes-woman. "She felt that, when we had booked this originally, we booked it with her alone, and she wanted to keep it that way." The show gave in; Hite went on the air alone, although Neger says "GMA" toughened up its questions.

Hite sued the writer Philip Nobile hose editorial in Forum magazine said she was one of the "charlatans" who needed to be driven "out of the erogenous zones" - for making "false and defamatory statements." The $15 million suit was settled out of court. Hite's lawyer in the case says; neither party is allowed to disclose the terms of the deal. However, Nobile has apparently issued no public apology or retraction.

Yet for all the argument over Hite's numbers and what they really mean, for all the mystery surrounding Diana Greg-ory, even Hite's sharpest detractors feel the issues she's tackling are important.

Author Hite: Ouestions have been raised about her statistics.

respondents mirror the U.S. female population, Sullivan notes. "I've talked to her about that. She shouldn't say it quite that way. With this kind of a sample, the wisest thing to do is talk about the percentages in the sample, and wonder whether one can generalize."

Some methodologists, researchers and statisticians who have examined Hite's approach go further, and say her women don't represent much of anything. Hite says she sent out 100,000 questionnaires; 4,500 were returned. "So few people responded, it's not representative of any group, except the odd group who agreed to respond, says Donald Rubin, chairman of the Department of Statistics at Harvard University.

Hite said, in defending her statistics on television talk show, that "the presidents of the American Psychological Association, the American Sociological Association have all said that my methodology is great."

"Good Lord," said Herbert Gans, ASA president and a sociology professor at Columbia University, when he heard of Hite's comment. He said he had received a copy of "Women and Love" from Hite the day the show aired, but hadn't read it.

"I don't know what it is. I know it's about sex, and I've heard the methodology is dubious," Gans said. Hite's comment was, he added, "unprofessional, not becoming of a social scientist, and a lie."

As for APA President Bonnie Strick-land: "Scholars and scientists ask different questions and use different methods of inquiry. I think the book is very valuable, but as a professor of psychology I am not the best person to make a judg-ment about this particular type of methodology.'

Hite has suggested that her critics haven't read her work, so they weren't making informed comments. So several methodology experts were asked by The Washington Post to look at "Women and They raise serious questions about her data.

If I'm going to talk about 'What is love?,' I can't just ask a handful of peo-ple," Hite said in an interview. "I have to ask a broad sample. To me, it's very important to measure different parts of the population, because there might be important differences."

Actually, the differences are minimal Most women in Hite's study seem to feel the same way. Take one of her more controversial statistics: "70 percent of women married five years or more are having sex outside of their marriages." Here's the percentage breakdown by in-

 Household income under $5,000: 71 percent are having affairs.

• Income $6,000-$14,000: 72 percent.

 Income $15,000-$39,000: 68 percent. Income $40,000-$74,000: 69 percent. Income over $75,000: 70 percent.

She's talking about something of funthought-out product."
